Lady Aurelia Vale

How To Play

At the Nocturne Society's Midnight Masquerade, Lady Aurelia Vale promised to expose a criminal hidden among its members. At midnight, a figure wearing Aurelia's white swan mask and ceremonial cloak appeared on the ballroom balcony.

Aurelia had already been dead for twenty minutes.

Her interrupted speech recording captured the fatal attack at 11:40 p.m. The post-mortem confirmed that the wound would have caused death within moments. Someone else had worn her mask. The society's membership register contains 6,080 names. One of them belongs to the masquerade murderer.

Your task is to identify the killer.

HOW IT WORKS

You will be given 20 clues relating to the killer's first name, surname or fixed position in the printed suspect register. Nineteen of those clues are true. One clue is deliberately false.

The correct identity is the only suspect that satisfies all nineteen true clues and contradicts the single false clue. You should therefore eliminate a suspect only after that suspect contradicts two or more clues. Work carefully through the complete set of clues. When every clue has been applied correctly, only one suspect should contradict exactly one clue. That suspect is the masquerade murderer. Your investigative tool is the suspect register that fills this book.

THE SUSPECTS

Every numbered line in the register represents a separate suspect. Each entry contains:

- A printed suspect number
- A first name
- A surname

Unless a clue specifically refers to the surname, “the killer’s name” means the first name printed for that suspect. References to the first letter, last letter or total number of letters also concern the first name unless the clue states otherwise.

Names may appear more than once. Two entries with the same first name, surname or complete name remain separate suspects because they have different printed numbers and fixed positions in the register.

HOW TO READ THE REGISTER

Read each register page in columns. Begin at the top of the first column and work downward before moving to the top of the next column.

Some clues concern the spelling of the killer’s first name or surname. Others concern the printed number beside the suspect. Apply each clue literally and use only the information printed in the book.

Previous eliminations never change the original spelling, numbering, order, page, column or row of the entries.

THE ONE FALSE CLUE

Exactly one of the 20 clues is false. The false clue is intentional. It is not an error and does not mean that the puzzle has multiple answers.

Keep track of how many clues each suspect contradicts:

- A suspect who contradicts two or more clues can be eliminated.
- After all 20 clues have been tested, a suspect who contradicts no clues cannot be the answer, because the correct identity must expose the false clue.
- The correct identity will contradict exactly one clue and satisfy the other nineteen.

You may test the clues in any order. Working from clue 1 through clue 20 is recommended, but the final result will be the same when every clue is applied correctly.

RULES FOR LETTERS AND NAMES

The vowels are A, E, I, O and U. The letter Y is always treated as a consonant. Ignore capitalisation when comparing or counting letters. Repeated letters are counted each time they appear unless a clue asks for the number of distinct letters or distinct vowels.

When letters are given numerical values, use their positions in the alphabet:

A = 1, B = 2, C = 3 ... Z = 26.

Spaces, hyphens, apostrophes and other punctuation marks are not letters and should not be included in letter totals.

WORKED EXAMPLE

Suppose the register contained only the following three suspects:

- 101 Lena Hart
- 102 Owen Price
- 103 Mara Hall

Now suppose there were three clues, exactly one of which was false:

1. The name contains the letter A.
2. The surname has exactly five letters.
3. The printed number contains the digit 2.

Lena satisfies clue 1. However, Hart has four letters and her printed number does not contain the digit 2. She contradicts two clues and can therefore be eliminated.

Owen contradicts clue 1, but Price has five letters and his printed number is 102. He contradicts exactly one clue and remains under consideration.

Mara satisfies clue 1, but Hall has four letters and her printed number does not contain the digit 2. Like Lena, she contradicts two clues and can be eliminated.

Owen is the only suspect who contradicts exactly one clue. He is therefore the answer, and clue 1 is the deliberate lie.

Use the same method with the complete suspect register. Test every surviving identity against all 20 clues and retain the one that fails exactly one.

A FAIR INVESTIGATION

Apart from the single deliberate lie, every clue is fair, literal and complete. There are no additional red herrings, no facts that require outside research and no answers that depend upon guessing part of the story.

The narrative explains Aurelia's murder, but it does not reveal the killer's identity. That identity can be found only by applying the clues to the suspect register. When the clues are applied correctly, they will always lead to the same answer.

Any photographs, documents or illustrations included in the case file are provided for atmosphere only and are not required to solve the puzzle unless explicitly stated otherwise.

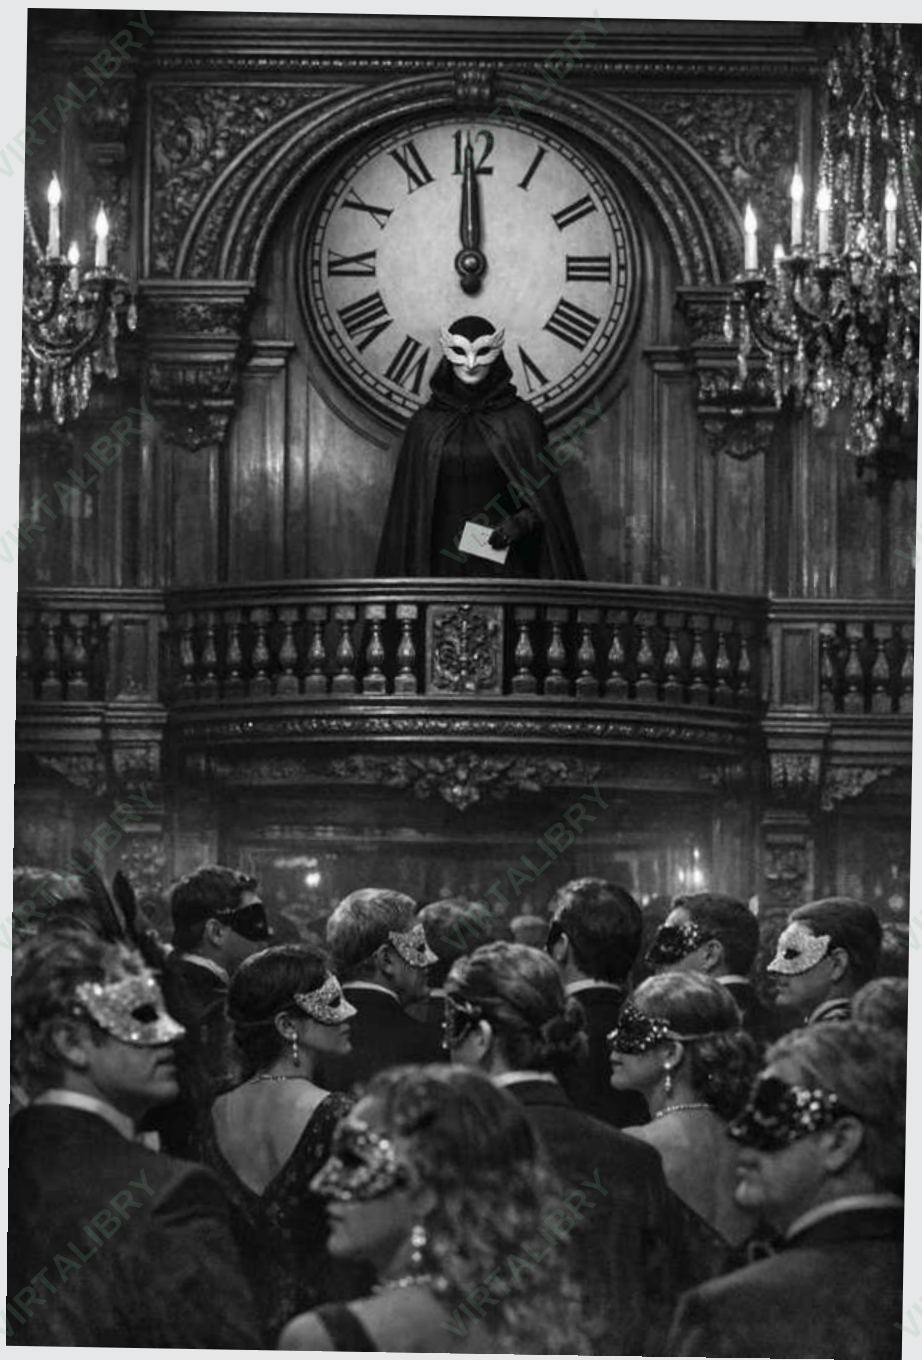

YOU ARE READY

The white swan mask appeared on the balcony at midnight. Lady Aurelia Vale had already been dead for twenty minutes, and the person wearing her mask vanished back into a society of 6,080 possible identities.

The masquerade murderer is one of those suspects.

The killer's name is already in this book.

The investigation begins on the next page.

Incident Report

Reference: NS-1031 / Vesper House Investigation

THE MIDNIGHT MASQUERADE

For more than a century, the Nocturne Society had counted ministers, financiers, collectors and heirs to private fortunes among its members. Its most closely guarded tradition was the annual Midnight Masquerade at Vesper House.

The society had 6,080 active members. Every one of them received a sealed invitation and was entitled to attend without giving advance notice. At the entrance, attendants verified the society's seal but did not record the bearer's name. Masks remained in place, introductions were forbidden and no attendance register was created.

By design, investigators would later be unable to prove which members had entered Vesper House that night. For the duration of the masquerade, a costume was accepted in place of an identity.

THE PROMISED REVELATION

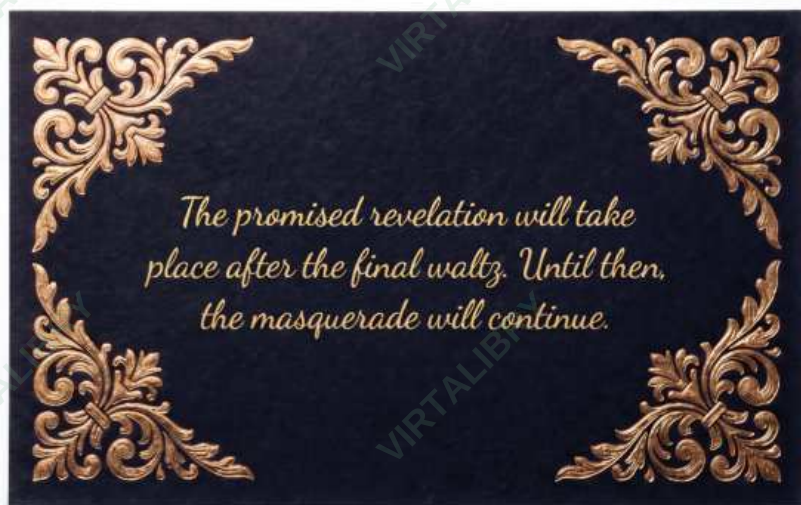

Lady Aurelia Vale, keeper of the society's private archive, had discovered more than three million dollars missing from its charitable foundation. The transfers had been authorised with the credentials of Felix Dane, a former treasurer who had died two years earlier, then routed through companies connected to one active society member.

Aurelia informed the council that she would expose the culprit from the ballroom balcony at midnight. She refused to release the name beforehand. By half past eleven, word of the promised revelation had spread through Vesper House. The person she intended to identify knew it too.

At 11:34 p.m., Aurelia left the ballroom in her white swan mask and ceremonial cloak. Witnesses saw her enter the west archive carrying a pocket recorder and the black financial ledger she intended to present from the balcony. The recorder captured a rehearsal of her accusation. At 11:40 p.m., she reached the sentence, 'The person responsible is-' The recording broke off. A chair scraped across the floor, glass shattered and a brief struggle followed. The attacker never spoke. After twelve seconds, the archive fell silent.

No one in the ballroom heard the disturbance over the orchestra, and no witness saw Aurelia leave. At exactly midnight, however, a figure wearing her white swan mask and floor-length cloak stepped onto the balcony. The figure did not speak. Instead, a sealed card was handed to the master of ceremonies.

The card read:

The figure bowed, withdrew through the balcony curtains and disappeared down the private stairway. Hundreds of guests believed they had seen Aurelia alive.

No one had seen the face beneath the full mask or heard the figure's voice. The high collar and floor-length cloak concealed height and build. The guests recognised the white swan costume and supplied Aurelia's identity themselves.

THE BODY IS FOUND

At 12:18 a.m., during the final waltz, a maid found Aurelia's body behind a folding screen in the mirror gallery adjoining the west archive. Her white swan mask and ceremonial cloak were missing. One glove lay beside the archive desk, and the black financial ledger had also disappeared.

Blood evidence showed that Aurelia had been attacked beside the archive desk and moved only a short distance into the gallery. Beneath a cabinet, investigators recovered a narrow antique blade taken from a display in the archive. The handle had been wiped clean. Aurelia's recorder lay beneath the desk. Gold powder on the recovered glove suggested that, during the struggle, she had reached for the attacker's mask or costume. A torn loop of white thread from her cloak was found beside the balcony stair.

The recording fixed the attack at 11:40 p.m. A post-mortem examination established that the close-range blade wound would have caused death within moments. Aurelia could not have crossed the balcony twenty minutes later.

The figure seen at midnight had not been the victim. Someone had killed Aurelia, taken her mask, cloak and ledger, and appeared before the ballroom in her place.

SIX THOUSAND AND SEVENTY-NINE MASKS

Investigators attempted to reconstruct the guest list. There was none. Entrance staff could describe masks, colours and costumes, but the society's rules had forbidden them from recording names. Invitation seals proved that the bearers were members; they did not identify which members had attended.

Some guests admitted being present only after their identities became impossible to conceal. Others refused to answer, claimed to have lent costumes to friends or insisted that the society's promise of anonymity remained binding. Security photographs showed hundreds of masked figures but almost no uncovered faces.

A concealed servants' passage connected the west archive, the balcony stair and a disused costume room beside the ballroom. Dust had been disturbed along the route. A strip of white fabric was caught on a nail inside the passage, and the same fine gold powder found on Aurelia's glove marked the costume-room door. The passage allowed the killer to move unseen from the archive to the balcony, discard or alter the stolen costume and return to the crowd within minutes.

No reliable witness could say who entered the passage before midnight or who emerged from the costume room afterward. Because the stolen funds had been routed to one active member, the complete membership roll became the only defensible suspect pool. All 6,080 names remained under consideration.

THREE MILLION DOLLARS MISSING

The financial inquiry began with payments approved through Felix Dane's dormant credentials. His authorisation code had been used repeatedly during the previous six months. Each payment moved through restoration trusts, charitable projects and companies with no employees or legitimate business activity.

Aurelia had traced the companies to temporary addresses, incomplete applications and intermediaries acting for an unnamed owner. The surviving records did not disclose that owner, but they established that the final recipient was an active member of the Nocturne Society.

The stolen black ledger contained the original authorisations. Without it, investigators could prove the theft but could not connect the money to a particular name. A partial digital copy ended at the page where the recipient's identity should have appeared.

AURELIA'S SAFEGUARD

Aurelia had prepared a second route to the same identity. Inside her private safe, investigators found the complete society membership register and twenty numbered statements written in her hand. A note attached to them explained how they were to be used.

"Nineteen statements describe the person I intend to expose. One statement is deliberately false. The lie is a safeguard, not a mistake. Use the complete register and find the single name that exposes it."

The statements concerned the spelling of the killer's first name or surname and the entry's fixed position in the printed register. Together, they preserved the identity that had vanished from the financial evidence.

The evidence established the crime without revealing the culprit's name: one active member had stolen the society's money, killed Aurelia at 11:40 p.m. and appeared in her mask twenty minutes later. The name could now be recovered only from the register Aurelia had left behind.

FIND THE KILLER

Examine all 20 clues and apply them to the membership register. Unless a clue specifically refers to the surname, 'the killer's name' means the suspect's first name. References to a register page, column, row, neighbouring entry or printed number mean the fixed information shown beside that identity in the book.

Eliminate every suspect who contradicts two or more clues. The masquerade murderer is the only entry that satisfies nineteen clues and contradicts exactly one.

A complete solution should identify:

- The killer's first and last name
- The printed suspect number
- The register page and position
- The deliberately false clue

Inspector Mara Voss closes the evidence file and places the membership register on the desk. 'Aurelia hid one name among thousands. The mask concealed a face, but the clues preserve the identity. Find it.'

At midnight, Lady Aurelia Vale appeared on the ballroom balcony.

She had already been dead for twenty minutes.

The person wearing her mask is named in this register.

Who is the masquerade murderer?

Clues

One of the clues below is a LIE: it is deliberately false. Every other clue is true. The masked killer is the only suspect who satisfies nineteen clues and contradicts exactly one.

- ☐ CLUE 1: The register page containing the killer's entry includes at least five first names that are four letters long.
- ☐ CLUE 2: The first letter of the killer's first name is NOT one of the four most common starting letters in the complete register. Those letters are A, M, K and J.
- ☐ CLUE 3: The register page containing the killer's entry includes at least six first names beginning with the letter A.
- ☐ CLUE 4: The second letter of the killer's first name falls in the first half of the alphabet, from A through M.
- ☐ CLUE 5: The killer's first name contains the letter E.
- ☐ CLUE 6: The killer's first name contains fewer than seven letters.
- ☐ CLUE 7: No vowel appears more than once in the killer's first name.
- ☐ CLUE 8: The killer's first name is five letters long. Five-letter names are not among the two most common name lengths in the complete register; those lengths are six and seven letters.
- ☐ CLUE 9: The killer's first name uses exactly five distinct letters.

- ☐ CLUE 10: The first name immediately before the killer's entry begins with a consonant.
- ☐ CLUE 11: The alphabet values of the first and last letters of the killer's first name add up to at least 20, using A = 1 through Z = 26.
- ☐ CLUE 12: The killer's first name contains the letter D.
- ☐ CLUE 13: Of the two first names printed on the killer's horizontal row, exactly one contains the letter N.
- ☐ CLUE 14: The killer's first name does not end with two consonants.
- ☐ CLUE 15: The alphabet values of the final two letters of the killer's first name add up to less than 19, using A = 1 through Z = 26.
- ☐ CLUE 16: The killer's first name begins with a letter from A through S.
- ☐ CLUE 17: The first name immediately after the killer's entry begins with a consonant.
- ☐ CLUE 18: The gap between the earliest and latest letters in the killer's first name is at least 18.
- ☐ CLUE 19: The killer's first name contains the letter S.
- ☐ CLUE 20: The killer's surname contains an even number of letters.

THE INVESTIGATION

Inspector Mara Voss placed the balcony card beside Aurelia's recording transcript and post-mortem report. The audio fixed the fatal attack at 11:40 p.m. Hundreds of witnesses had seen the white swan mask at midnight, but not one had seen the face beneath it.

The figure had never spoken. The guests had recognised a costume and supplied the identity themselves. By postponing the revelation until the final waltz, the killer had transformed an entire ballroom into a false alibi.

Voss returned to the membership register. A mask could mislead the eye. A name still had to survive nineteen truths and one lie.

THE INVESTIGATION

The servants' passage smelled of damp stone and old fabric. It ran from the archive to the balcony stairs, then ended beside the disused costume room. Dust had been disturbed along the entire route.

The white swan mask and cloak were still missing. Somewhere between the balcony and the ballroom, the killer had discarded Aurelia's identity and resumed another one.

Inspector Voss crossed out another cluster of names. The costume had concealed height, build, voice and gender. The register concealed nothing.

THE INVESTIGATION

The stolen money had travelled through restoration trusts, charities and companies that existed only on paper. Every route ended at the missing identification page from Aurelia's ledger.

Aurelia had anticipated that the financial evidence might be taken. Her numbered statements were a second route to the same identity - one that required the complete register to follow.

Inspector Voss marked another contradiction. The killer had stolen the page that named them and overlooked the puzzle that would name them again.

THE INVESTIGATION

Nineteen statements told the truth. One had been designed to punish anyone who trusted a partial copy or stopped checking too soon.

A suspect who failed two clues was impossible. A suspect who failed none could not expose the lie. Only a name that contradicted exactly one statement could belong on the arrest warrant.

The surviving names grew fewer. Somewhere among them was the guest who had stood above the ballroom in a dead woman's mask.

THE INVESTIGATION

Morning pressed pale light against the windows of Vesper House. The final guests had surrendered their costumes, repeated their alibis and left under guard, but Aurelia's mask had not been recovered.

Inspector Voss no longer needed the missing mask. The remaining name would lead back to the shell companies, the stolen ledger and the person who had stepped out of the archive passage before midnight.

One false statement remained among nineteen truths. The next pages would decide who had written the dead woman's final message in a stolen hand.

EPILOGUE

Morning light reached the high windows of Vesper House as Inspector Voss completed the final review.

The crime had required only minutes. Aurelia's recording fixed the fatal attack in the west archive at 11:40 p.m., and the post-mortem findings showed that the wound would have caused death within moments. Her mask and cloak were carried through the servants' passage. Twenty minutes later, the killer appeared on the balcony, postponed the promised revelation and returned to the crowd before the body was discovered.

The surviving name opened the final part of the investigation. Financial records connected that identity to the companies receiving the society's stolen funds. A search recovered fragments of the missing ledger, the clasp from Aurelia's ceremonial cloak and traces of the same gold powder found on Aurelia's glove.

For one night, the Nocturne Society had allowed every face to disappear. Aurelia had made certain that one name could not.

Inspector Voss opened the waiting arrest warrant and filled in the empty line.

THE SOLUTION

Morning reached the windows of Vesper House as the final review ended. Six thousand and eighty masked identities had been reduced to a single surviving suspect.

Only one member satisfied nineteen clues and contradicted exactly one.

Lady Aurelia Vale had been killed at 11:40 p.m. The murderer took her white swan mask, ceremonial cloak and ledger, then used the servants' passage to reach the ballroom balcony. By appearing before the guests at midnight, the killer created the illusion that Aurelia was still alive before disappearing among the masked members of the Nocturne Society.

Selia Shaw is the masquerade murderer. The name appears on Suspect Register - Page 91 as the 50th entry in reading order and the 19th entry in the second column. Selia satisfies nineteen clues and contradicts exactly one. The deliberately false clue is clue 12: 'The killer's first name contains the letter D.' Every other clue is true.

A Note From The Author

You've made it to the end! I hope the clues tested your powers of deduction, kept you guessing and made the moment when only one name remained especially satisfying.

If you enjoyed the experience, I would be incredibly grateful if you left an honest review on Amazon. It does not need to be long—a sentence or two about your experience is more than enough. Every review helps new puzzle solvers discover the book and gives independent authors and small publishers like me the opportunity to create more original mysteries.

Thank you again for reading, investigating and following the evidence all the way to the truth. I hope this will not be the last case we solve together.

Until the next mystery,

Lara Cox
